THE GUILFORD COLLEGIAN, VOL. 4: SEPTEMBER, 1891 (CLASSIC REPRINT)

Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Guilford Collegian, Vol. 4: September, 1891 But as one of the sheriff s deputies was to be company for part of the journey, I felt somewhat reassured. In a few minutes the Pacific express from St. Paul to Portland pulled into the station and we boarded. A ride of two hours down the Missoula valley brought us to Ravalli, where we were to take stage in the morning for the foot of the lake. Ravalli is only a station situated in the Flathead Indian Reservation, and derives its importance only from being the shipping point of the whole Flathead country. It was dark when we arrived there, and as we got off and walked up the station platform, crowded with teamsters, half-breeds and an occasional Indian, wrapped up to his ears in his blanket, I felt for the first time that I was actually in the genuine wild and woolly west. Finally we found the stage waiting, and we climbed in among Swedes, Germans, Irish, half-breeds, a Chinaman and half a dozen other nationalities, all bound for the Flathead. Three or four hundred yards brought us to the hotel where we were to put up for the night. The hotel is kept by a half-breed, as white men are not allowed a permanent residence on the Reservation. Wishing to get all the sleep we could, preparatory to our long ride the next day, we immediately called for our room. The hotel proper being full, the proprietor called a dirty one gallused Indian and directed him to show us our sleeping place. Taking a candle he told us to follow. About one hundred yards out...
